

A Walk through the Snow

"In this piece I've been experimenting with the simulation of a real-world environment out of many separate sources. My idea was to invite the listener into a somewhat familiar situation via this simulated world, and then to manipulate the individual sounds slowly so that the perception would be of a world slowly melting into something else...

All sounds are derived from birds, footsteps, or a stream."